A Final Medical Message:

Caring for a client with a mast cell activation related issue or disorder entails an understanding of their often profound medical challenges. These are people with what can be highly complicated needs. The challenges for healthcare professionals and caregivers are many and can seem daunting.

These disorders impact lives at many levels – medical, emotional, physical, psychological, social, and spiritual. It is vital that we educate ourselves in order to provide the best quality care and, most especially, to avoid causing potential harm by way of the behaviors we may exhibit and/or the choices we make through our lack of understanding.

The CELACare Mast Cell Health programs address how to support individuals with a mast cell activation related issue or disorder by providing essential education and training.
